Rakas Anna, Terveiset sydämelliset kiitokset kirjieestä, joka tuli aivan hyvään aikaan.

Gerald antoi minua lukea tämän ja sanoide vanse väkän hamillaan, kun se on minun viralli.

nen, mutta hän sanoo, että hänen sydämensä parit kätt kirjoittamaan tällä tavalla, kun hän ja Eric eivät ollekaan

de sillä kannalla, että minä nyt vielä saisin jättää

Suomen merta.

No, kyllä se mitään tulee oikein rakkautta.

Minun teetistä tulee mielestäni vielä kirjoittaa jotain, kun on näin hyvä tilaisuus enkä mitenkään jaks ajatella toisesta elämästä, kuten ahmisseen etsimistä y. m.

Kaikkia hyviä rakkaalle Annalle!

without him.

Pekka has just completed his book. He read it to us and it seems to me that it is the finest that he has yet written. He is very tired now, but he is contemplating to begin a new book. I was quite terrified and told him that he must have some rest before beginning the newbook, because he would become quite exhausted.

I remember that once you asked me some questions about the Master who called us here. Now I think you will be glad to hear that he dwells here in Southern California, but we haven't as yet met him physically. Best regards and sincerely yours,

Gerald

Dear Anna,

Thank you very much for your nice letter that I got some days ago.

Yesterday Pekka received your letter and I was happy to hear your opinion about Pekka's return to Finland. You see, there are some relations of his in Finland who always write how it is lonesome without him, also some of our members write him asking if he will be there at the annual meeting, naturally Pekka who is awfully kind starts to contemplate about his return.

Pekka is too modest to think that his life is valuable for the White Brotherhood. He is ^{now} ~~almost~~ ^{the only one} ~~alone~~ whom the Brotherhood may use for the work in the world. But he doesn't think himself how important it is that his health should be restored.

Now thanks to the severe winter in the east he understands that it is quite impossible and dangerous too to start from here. He has written to Finland that he doesn't know when it is possible for him to return, and that they should keep the Annual Meeting without him.

Pekka has just completed his book. He read it to us and it seems to me that it is the finest that he has yet written. He is very tired now, but he is contemplating to begin a new book. I was quite terrified and told him that he must have some rest before beginning the new book, because he would become quite exhausted.

I remember that once you asked me some questions about the Master who called us here. Now I think you will be glad to hear that He dwells here in Southern California, but we haven't as yet met him physically. Best regards and sincerely yours,

Gerald.

Hope to hear from you soon!
